DECLARATION OF RICCARDO BANCHETTI

Riccardo Banchetti declares under penalty of perjury, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1746, as follows:

1. I make this Declaration based on my personal knowledge. The facts set forth below are true and correct to the best of my knowledge. I submit this affidavit in opposition to the Debtors' 118th and 314th omnibus objections to claims.

2. I was employed by Lehman Brothers beginning August 1993. I remained a Lehman employee up to and through the date it filed for bankruptcy/administration until I was hired by the Lehman estate to assist in its liquidation. I remained a Lehman estate employee until April 2009 at which time my employment was terminated.

3. Lehman compensated me on what it called a Total Compensation basis by payment of an annual salary payable monthly plus a bonus. Consistent with the investment banking industry, my bonus was more than an integral part of my compensation; it was the majority of my compensation.

4. For each year between 2003 and 2007, shortly after the end of the fiscal year, Lehman told me verbally and in writing, the amount of my total compensation for that year and that it had determined the year-end part of my total compensation would be divided into portions: in certain years one designated as CSAs, one as options and the balance that was the cash award; in the other years one portion designated as CSAs and the balance as a cash award.

5. When Lehman paid me the cash portion of my Total Compensation, Lehman reported it to the tax authorities as compensation income and I paid income tax on it through customary withholding. While the CSA-designated portion was declared as part of my total compensation at the same time, it was not reported by Lehman to the tax authorities as compensation income.

6. My participation in the CSA compensation plan was automatic and mandatory -- there were no election or enrollment forms to complete, I could not choose whether or not to participate. I paid no tax on the CSA-designated portion of my total compensation upon the grant of the CSA.

7. At the outset of my employment I was told, both verbally and in writing, that at the Firm's option a portion of my total compensation (combined base salary and other compensation) may be payable in the form of CSAs pursuant to the Firm's employee stock award program. I was not told at the outset of employment that I was required to take a minimum portion of my Total Compensation each fiscal year in the form of shares of the Company. Further, any portion of my Total Compensation payable in the form of CSAs in any year was at the discretion of Lehman and varied from year to year according to a "compensation grid" that was revised a number of times during the course of my employment.

8. Pursuant to the CSA Agreements, I recognized that in order to be paid my compensation, I was contractually obligated to avoid engaging in any "Detrimental Activity" and that under these Agreements, I had other employment-related conditions, none of which were performance based, which needed to be met over the course of a five year period. If Lehman exercised its option to pay a portion of my total compensation in the form of CSAs, as Lehman cautioned me in the program documents it provided, I had no rights as a stockholder until I became the record holder of stock. Further, I had no ability to sell, assign, pledge or otherwise dispose of the CSAs. Even after the CSAs vested or become subject to limited conditions, the CSAs did not automatically convert to stock and I was not permitted to sell the shares.

9. What Lehman describes as a financial incentive to remain with Lehman was really Lehman's assertion of financial control over significant portions of my total compensation. There was nothing in this practice that attracted me to work at Lehman – it was just withholding my earnings as a means of making it costly for me to leave the firm. The CSAs were never a form of compensation I elected to take; it was Lehman's way of handcuffing employees to the firm.

10. I did not join Lehman so that I could make a profit on its stock. My decision to join Lehman did not turn on the nature of the CSA plan. What drove me to join Lehman was a career decision. I came to Lehman as an employee and not as an investor.

11. Finally, with CSAs I paid tax at ordinary income rates on the full market value of the shares Lehman issued to me upon conversion after five years; not capital gains on any portion of the market value which might have been greater than the value at the initial grant date.

12. Lehman does not dispute that it retained me to perform services as an employee and that it received the benefit of my services, for which at the end of each fiscal year it declared my Total Compensation. Although I continued to work for Lehman in reliance on its promise to pay me the compensation it declared I had earned, Lehman subsequent to bankruptcy claims that unpaid amount is now classified as equity, even though no equity was ever issued and I had no rights as a holder of equity.

13. As far as I know no annual brochures or any description of the CSAs program states that if Lehman filed for bankruptcy I would not have the same standing as other unpaid general creditors simply because I had been a participant in the employer imposed CSA plan. Subsequent to the bankruptcy through my proof of claim filing, I learned that any priority wage claim I have would be limited to the 180-day period prior to the bankruptcy filing.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.
